AN EXPLOSIVE ALCHEMY THAT BURNS THE RULES

After Disguise, their blazing debut on March 28, the Franco-Slovak duo hits again. X.irda and ReMark return to fan the flames with their latest track: "Fireman."

X.irda, the Lyon-based producer and genre-blending artist, crafts a soundscape so rich and cinematic you can almost touch it. On this emotional canvas, ReMark's voice lands with raw honesty swinging between gritty rock tension and sheer vulnerability.

What's the outcome? A bold and intimate sonic experience built on opposites: tenderness and fury, pain and strength.

"Fireman" burns with intensity—a visceral hit where toxic pop collides with truth-spitting rap. A piercing pop-rap ballad, echoing like a personal cry in the chaos of human relationships.

A POLISHED PRODUCTION – BALANCING TENSION AND FRAGILITY

X.irda, known for his melodic sharpness and organic textures, stretches his boundaries once again. In “Fireman,” he injects a post-rock tension guitars, ambient waves, dramatic silences. The sonic backdrop breathes with doubt, echoes, and quiet urgency.

ReMark, with a voice part angel, part explosion, unleashes raw rage and unfiltered emotion.

This duo doesn’t chase easy thrills. They lean into the emotional rupture, the elegance of discomfort. “Fireman” doesn’t heal the wounds—it shows them, with poetic clarity.

The lyrics of “Fireman” tell a tale of mysterious and conflicted love where gestures no longer heal what's missing.

It's also an anthem for heroes with no armor. For those who wear a uniform the same way they wear their emotions wide open.

TOWARD LOSING CONTROL – AN ALBUM UNDER PRESSURE

This single sets the tone for their much anticipated collaborative album “Losing Control,” outcoming on August 29, 2025.

X.irda and ReMark are becoming one of the most distinctive artists in today's pop-rap scene trendsetters rather than followers. In the spirit of Juice WRLD, Post Malone, or Yung Xavi, this is a deeply personal, emotionally raw project.

It explores inner fractures, blurry love, and suspended moments.

They lit the spark. Now it's your turn to feel the heat.
